MOROCCO

Moroccan Riads

Most riads are eighteenth- or nineteenth-century Medina townhouses which have been bought and refurbished. Invisible for travellers who are walking around the old town, these Riads - closed from outside - don't reveal their charm. The alleyways which lead to the houses are narrow, and entrance doors are very insignificant.

Once the doors are opened, you will have the pleasure to discover a patio planted with trees, organised around a fountain. The sound discrepancy between the medinas' hubbub and the house peacefulness will reinforce your impression of serenity.
